01 FACTS OF THE CASE

In CMP 17003/2026, the Court considered revival of CWP 11712/2024 after its disposal dated 25 June 2025. The appearances describe counsel as acting for the applicant-petitioner. The source identifies the Supreme Court order dated 10 April 2026 in Income Tax Officer v. Tej Partap Singh, Civil Appeal 4716/2026, as Annexure A-2. It does not reproduce the earlier disposal's reasons or the impugned notices.

05 EXPERT COMMENTS

Preserve the exact restoration and interim-application identities — The operative recall concerns CMP 17003/2026, the earlier disposal dated 25 June 2025 and the original CWP 11712/2024. The interim application is CMP 19368/2024. These identifiers distinguish this matter from other orders applying the same Supreme Court direction. The Court restores the existing writ and its applications; disposing of the recall and interim applications does not amount to finally disposing of the restored writ. The source gives no basis to create another petition number or to merge this taxpayer with a different same-date case. This Sudhir Gupta order concerns CWP11712/2024 and its own CMPs. The same taxpayer has other supplied same-date writs11711/2024 and11718/2024; they remain separate matters rather than duplicates. (Source: PDF pp.1–2).

The reproduced protection remains tied to the impugned notices and pending writ — The High Court extends paragraph 27's protection concerning further reassessment proceedings pursuant to the impugned notices during the pendency of the writ petitions, subject to High Court terms and conditions. The supplied quotation repeats the word reassessment, and this note reports protection for further reassessment proceedings without silently expanding the source into an unrestricted stay of all tax activity. The direction is interim and source-specific, not a final annulment of the notices or a prediction of how the writ will ultimately be decided. (Source: PDF pp.1–2).

The recorded reply and two-week rejoinder direction must remain distinct — The Court records that the reply already stood filed and directs a rejoinder within two weeks. It grants no fresh four-week reply period and no four-week rejoinder period. Those schedules appear in other matters and cannot be imported into this order. The source also does not establish whether a rejoinder was subsequently filed. The listing date is 17 August 2026. These are historical directions in this particular writ; the source does not establish later compliance, the listed hearing's result or a new period beginning with publication of this note. (Source: PDF p.1).

The recorded applicant roles and source limits matter — The appearances identify counsel for the applicant-petitioner. The exact caption, original disposal date and application numbers remain part of this source's identity, even where another taxpayer's restoration follows similar language. The Court identifies the 10 April 2026 Supreme Court order in Civil Appeal 4716/2026 and applies the reproduced paragraph. This note does not represent an independent review of the complete Supreme Court judgment, the application annexures or subsequent treatment. The coram is Vivek Singh Thakur and Ranjan Sharma.
