ARUNĀCHAL PRADESH

Arunāchal Pradesh is India's easternmost state and lives up to its name (Arun = dawn, Achal = land) by being the first to meet the rising sun in the country. It borders China on the north, Myanmar on the east and Bhutān on the west. Arunāchal Pradesh, is one of the most sparsely populated states of India.

This region acquired an independent political status in January 20, 1972, when it was declared as Union Territory under the name of Arunāchal Pradesh. The state of Arunāchal Pradesh Bill was passed by the Parliament in 1986 and with effect from February 20, 1987. Arunāchal Pradesh became the 24th state of Indian Union.

It is the land of lush green forests, deep river valleys and beautiful plateaus. The land is mostly mountainous with the Himālayan range along the northern borders criss-crossed with ranges running north south. These divide the state into five river valleys: the Kameng, the Subansiri, the Siang, the Lohit and the Tirap. All these are fed by snow from the Himālayas and countless rivers and rivulets.

The weather and climate of Arunāchal Pradesh are quite distinct from the rest of the country. The climate of the state is highly hot and humid at the lower altitudes and in the valleys covered by swampy dense forest particularly in the eastern section, while it becomes extremely cold in the higher altitudes.
