ANDHRA PRADESH

Andhra Pradesh covers that part of India which is inhabited mainly by the Telugu speaking people. The State is situated at the southeast part of peninsular India, on the greater part of Deccan Plateau, sloping down to embrace quiet waters of the Bay of Bengal with a coast line of 960 km.

The Andhrās are an ancient people whose name is mentioned in 'Aitereya Brāhmana' a treatise written about 3000 years ago and its recorded history goes back to Mauryas. After the death of Emperor Ashoka, the Sātavāhanās established a kingdom in this region. Successive dynasties the Ikshvākus, Pallavās, Chālukyās, Kākatīyās, Vijayanagar kings,Qutub Shāhis, Mughals and Asaf Jāhis interspersed with French, Dutch and British, have added to the State's rich history and cultural heritage. The sacred Hindu added to the State's rich history and cultural heritage. The sacred Hindu temples with their exquisite carvings, ancient Buddhist structures such as Stupas, Chaitiyās and Viharās, magnificient Muslim shrines and imposing churches testify splendour of these rulers. This hoary antiquity reflects Synthesis, as the keynote of Andhra culture, Life, now in the modern state, also reflects this synthesis of various cultures.

Andhra Pradesh, with vast natural resources, is a riverine land being the gift of 5 major rivers, namely Godāvarī, Krishna, Pennenu, Nāgāvalī and Varnasadhara.The Godāvarī and Krishna delta is one of the most fertile regions of the world. The State has rich minerals like coal, bauxite, limestone, barytes etc.

Andhra Pradesh is predominantly an agricultural state and regarded as the rice bowl of South India. But with advent of Industrialisation, the state has attracted many major has attracted many major industries and business enterprises. A major natural port at Visākhapatnam, considered to be the best in the East, and a good communication system have changed the economy of the state.

The State has rich tradition in classical music, home of Kūchipūdi dance, an important classical dance form for its sōrōttāting gestures and sentiment, painting and folk arts such as Burra Katha, Shadow puppet shows and famous for unique and unparallel arts and crafts such as Kalamkāri, Bidriware, Himroo artefacts, Banjāra apparels etc.,

Traversing through Andhra Pradesh is like meandering through a miniature India. The State abounding in hills and valleys with strange and fascinating rock formations, lush green fields, waterfalls and lakes, rimmed with a crescent of golden beaches, with sacred temples like Tirupati, the modern temples like Srīsailam, Kanakadurga, Nāgārjuna Sāgar, the second largest masonry dam in the world, a warm dry climate and friendly people provide a rare travel experience to a tourist.
